Generosity often means giving things to someone else, but it can also mean giving your time or sharing your talents.

generosity. There are lots of ways to show generosity — and you'll probably feel good about it, too!

Imagine you gave toys that you no longer play with to your younger brother or sister. It feels good to see their eyes light up and a smile cross their face as they get to play with toys that used to be fun for you, too. Or maybe you brought a treat to school in your lunchbox, like a favorite candy bar, and gave a piece of it to your friend. It feels good to hear them say, "thank you!" and to enjoy the treat together.

There are lots of ways to show generosity. During the holiday season especially, there are many ways to show love and kindness to others. You could give toys or clothes to other kids who need them in your town. Or you and your family could buy and give food to a local food bank for families who need it.

Generosity often means giving things to someone else, but it can also mean giving your time or sharing your talents. You could give your time by volunteering at a local animal shelter or visiting people at a nursing home. If you play an instrument, you could offer to play songs at a community center or church. If you like to do arts and crafts, you could make cards.

Then send them to people to cheer them up.

Doctors and scientists have studied what happens in people's bodies and brains when they give to others. It turns out, while you usually feel good about helping someone else, your body gets a boost, too. Giving to others helps you to feel happier and less stressed. People who give to others also tend to get sick less often. Being generous also helps some people to sleep better at night. Those are great benefits, on top of helping others!

It turns out, that old saying, "It is better to give than to receive," is true after all!
