FARM WORKER SUNDAY

April 28, Farm Worker Sunday, was a tremendous success. Here in Columbus at least 20,000 bulletin inserts on the farm worker struggle were distributed. Many churches and temples included the farm worker message in their service. At least 100 churches took part in some type of farm worker day celebration.

SI SE PUEDE

A lot of things have happen in the last month or so. The AFL-CIO has endorsed the boycotts, the strikes have started again in California. Already strikers have been attacked, beaten and arrested. Here in Columbus Gallo picket lines are continuing and Grape and Lettuce picket lines are starting.

Please plan to be with us, for we have a lot of strategy to discuss and plans to make for this summer. If you need a ride please call us, or if you can offer a ride to someone call us.

Don't forget to bring something good to eat and feel free to bring a friend or two. We'll be looking for you there!

'WE HAVE A DATE WITH JUSTICE'

National officers report to Coachella strikers:

The members of the National Executive Board of the UFW travelled to Coachella April 1 to meet with striking grape workers on the picket line at the Bag-darian Ranch. Later in the city members delivered brief reports on their work on the boycott and elsewhere in the union.

Here are three of those reports.

Dolores Huerta, first vice-president, New York boycott:

Last year we were really able to boycott the Coachella grapes. We got all the chain stores with the exception of A&P and one other one to boycott all but Lionel Steinberg's grapes, and K. K. Larsen's grapes, so here in Coachella and we know that the Boycott really affected them.

But we had just a very few people on the boycott last year, for example Oscar Mondragon here who was with the strikers of

Dolores Huerta

D'Arigo from Calexico, but this year we have more people out there, a lot more strikers. They've been out there picketing in the snow, out in front of the stores every day and talking, so we know we have a lot more strength. So while you are out here on the picket line with the flag, you can know that your brothers and sisters are out there on the boycott, every day on the picket line, so we know that together we are really going to smash the growers this year.... Que viva la causa!

Eliseo Medina, executive board member, Ohio boycott director:

I bring you greetings from the people of Ohio—we have boycott offices in six cities and volunteer committees in fifteen more. We think that if the growers thought that they had a rough time last year they haven't seen nothing yet. This year they are going to have a hell of a time selling the grapes.

And if you are willing to strike and if you are willing to struggle, the people of Ohio I am sure will back you up all the way and what we have to do is build a pincer movement—on one side the boycott and on the other, the strikes! And then, we just have to make it so tight that the growers recognize that there has to be one union, not only in the grapes but in the lettuce and the wine, a union of growers like they have now. And if you stick it out, we'll stick it out for as long as it takes.

Mack Lyons, executive board member, Florida UFW director:

I haven't been here in Coachella since 1969, but during that time I got the same feeling that I got here today from the people on the picket line. And that feeling is not the feeling of "If we are going to win" but "when we are going to win"....

Down in Florida the union membership is very much aware of what's going on up here because they know that if we lose the union out here then we might as well forget about it in Florida, and they ain't about to forget about the union in Florida. And there's no way that they are going to let the people here starve.

The union membership and the people that's working on the boycott down in Florida, they have already said that they could raise enough money, they know strikes aren't easy, but they have promised to raise enough money to feed you for at least two or three weeks just for one place, and that's just for one place.

When I go back to Florida, I'm going to be telling the people that they don't have to be concerned about you guys giving up, because you guys can take whatever the growers throw at you.

I don't have to speak Spanish to know that—it's just something that you naturally know from being around people like you that's so dedicated and I'm really happy to be working in Florida on the boycott—we don't have any grapes in Florida and I'm pretty sure that we ain't going to get any!
