

Environmental Health Zoominar Series

“Community-Based Participatory Research to Improve Risk Assessments During Disasters”

Yoshira Ornelas Van Horne, PhD

Postdoctoral Research Associate

Division of Environmental Health

University of Southern California

Date

Wed., Aug. 18, 2021

Time

12:00 - 1:00 pm

Location

Virtual via Zoom

Register

by Aug. 16, 2021

https://bit.ly/EH_VanHorne

Dr. Van Horne is a first-generation college graduate and received a PhD in Environmental Health Sciences from the University of Arizona. She received a Diversity Supplement Award from NIEHS. Her dissertation focused on working with the Diné communities impacted by the Gold King Mine Spill to develop a community-based risk assessment and collaborated with community partners to ensure the dissemination of culturally appropriate results. Dr. Van Horne's research focuses on addressing unequal exposures to harmful contaminants that affect structurally marginalized communities.