AUGUST 12 2010: INTERNATIONAL YOUTH DAY AND LAUNCH OF THE INTERNATIONAL YOUTH YEAR

- Following the proclamation by the UN General Assembly of the International Year of Youth: Dialogue and mutual understanding, on the occasion of the International Youth Day and the launch of this special year, we are, as the Chief Executive Officers of the world's largest youth movements, joining our voices to mark this significant event.
- Collectively, we reach over 100 million young people in over 200 countries and territories around the world. Through non-formal approaches and specific training and skills development, young people become more enabled and empowered with greater opportunities to engage and play an active role in making a difference in their respective communities.
- Young people bring much-needed skills when working alongside older people in a spirit of mutual respect. This intergenerational transfer of experience is vital to both progress and stability in society.
- Local youth actions such as peer education to prevent HIV and AIDS, protection of the environment, promotion of gender equality and advocacy for access to education are valuable contributions of young people towards realising the Millennium Development Goals.
- The values of social inclusion, dialogue, respect for diversity, non-discrimination, non-violence and peace that we promote create an enabling environment for young people to work together in building bridges for the benefit of all people in need.
- We fully support global advocacy for increased commitment and investment in youth, in particular young women and girls, for further youth participation, intergenerational and interfaith dialogue, and intercultural understanding among all people.
- We encourage all young people in our member organizations to get together, organize activities and celebrate the International Year of Youth.
- We call for action of all organizations and institutions in the public and private sector to respect the rights of children and youth, to prevent any form of abuse and to engage actively young people to build a better future.
