

Fact: Human and animal health are linked to the environment. (40 seconds)

Changes in the environment can make it easier for certain diseases to spread between people and animals.

Many germs spread to people and animals through water, soil, and plants.

Environmental hazards can harm both people and animals.

Protecting the environment helps protect the health of people and animals too.