10

Timely Claims Reporting

California law requires employers to report work-related injuries within 5 days of knowledge.

For serious injury, illness or death, employer must report immediately (no longer than 8 hours after the incident) to the local Cal/OSHA office.

- ✓ Early reporting reduces the probability of forgetting details relating to the accident
- ✓ A delay in reporting can raise claims costs
- ✓ First aid claims need to be reported
- ✓ Work closely with the claims adjuster and provide any requested documents timely

11

Reporting First Aid Claims

Effective January 1, 2017, California insurance commissioner approved changes to require the reporting of all medical-only or "first aid" claims.

Effective January 1, 2019, California's Workers' Compensation Insurance Rating Bureau (WCIRB) developed a new experience mod formula which excludes the first $250 of each claim from the calculation.

16

Litigated Claims

California workers' compensation claims end up in litigation for several different reasons, such as;

- Injured worker is confused about workers' comp system and seeks representation
- Claim is denied due to:
 - Injury determined not arising out of and in the course of employment
 - Lack of medical evidence to substantiate that the injury is work related
