

IDENTITY-BASED CAREER RESOURCES FOR First Generation

■ National Organizations

America Needs You: a nonprofit organization dedicated to fighting for economic mobility for ambitious, first-generation college students by providing transformative mentorship and intensive career development.

CareerSpring: a platform for first-generation students and graduates to access information, connect with professional networks, and build social capital through a career video library, advisor forums, and job placement services.

Center for First-Generation Student Success: resource of evidence-based practices, professional development, and knowledge creation for the higher education community to advance the success of first-generation students.

First Gen Journey Podcast: stories and discussions from first-generation college students and professionals to offer hope and support through college and the workforce.

I'm First!: nonprofit organization providing first-generation students with inspiration, information, and support through a national online mentoring program for college-bound students.

Mind Over Money: Stanford University offers personal finance learning modules to bolster your knowledge of money management including budgeting, credit, debt, emergency fund, insurance, investing, and retirement.