00309	Satellite	Research & Technology Maturation for the Exploitation of Emerging Technologies (RTMEE) & Technology Maturation for the Exploitation of Emerging Technologies (RTMEE)	STAR is the science arm of National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) National Environmental Satellite, Data, and Information Service (NESDIS), which acquires and manages the Nation's environmental satellites for NOAA. Satellite observations are critical to informing situational awareness and numerical weather prediction applications, which provide guidance to users and stakeholders on environmental threats at multiple timescales; from current analyses, to medium-range and seasonal-to-subseasonal lead times. Emerging echnologies in remote sensing are creating new opportunities to optimize the satellite global observing system architecture, and new numerical techniques are available to maximize the information extracted from current satellites and quantify benefit from next generation satellites.	4th Quarter FY 2025	No	No	Riverside Technology, Inc. 00275	Weather	Air Quality Support Services	To assist in ARL's provision of essential tools and information for decision-makers and the research community to (1) improve prediction of the atmospheric transport of toxic chemicals and other hazardous materials; (2) understand how and why climate has changed and what changes might occur in the future; and (3) use state-of-the-art methods and techniques, and develop new ones as necessary, to better understand and model the atmospheric boundary layer (the portion of the atmosphere closest to and most influenced by the Earth's surface). Our work improves the prediction of surface and near- surface weather and climate conditions. The boundary layer is the mixed layer of the atmosphere closest to the ground, where people live and work. We develop, improve, and test dispersion models and other tools for air quality and emergency response applications, including volcanic eruptions, forest fires, nuclear accidents, and homeland security incidents. We also develop instrumentation, design and evaluate high-resolution observing networks, and conduct field studies to improve the accuracy of atmospheric transport and dispersion predictions.	2nd Quarter FY 2025	No	No	Earth Resources Technology, Inc.
