ACCESS THE SCHEDULE OF CLASSES

The Schedule of Classes is under the Menu option on the Home Screen.

SEARCH THE SCHEDULE OF CLASSES

You can start searching for a course in the course prefix box by typing the prefix letters. The application will suggest courses containing those letters.

SCHEDULE OF CLASSES ADVANCED SEARCH

Students can utilize the ADVANCED SEARCH OPTIONS button when searching for courses. This can be implemented before or after entering a course.

Students can filter the results to a specific UK Core Area by clicking the drop-down by UK Core Area.

Students can also filter the results to 300+ level, Part-of-term, Fully Online Sections, and more.

After the selection is made, click SEARCH to apply the filter.

SCHEDULE OF CLASSES COURSE TIME FILTERS

Students can search for courses on specific days during specific times by hiding courses offered during times they wish to avoid.

Click the box beside each day or time that you do not want to see courses or sections listed for. The filter will be automatically applied; you do not have to click search again.

If you are searching for courses with an Advanced Search Options filter, or are entering only a course prefix, you can click Hide courses not offered to filter out any courses that are not offered during the term you have selected.

SEARCH RESULTS

The search results are grouped by the course with sections listed below, so you can view different sections of the same course together.

Prerequisites and restrictions will be listed below the course number for each course. Section-specific restrictions will be listed above the section that the restriction applies to.

Some courses will include which UK Core requirement the course may apply to.

Tip: You can click Hide Sections That Don't Fit to filter your search to courses that have available seats and will fit into your schedule.

Scientific archaeology has a problem: fringe ideas about mysteries of the past attract more interest than scholarly accounts of these same mysteries. In discussing the "mysterious" side of archaeology, this course asks why consideration of the past invites some of the most bizarre speculations about human life. Why do fringe theories about lost civilizations, intergalactic interactions, and mysterious technologies gain more popularity than mainstream theories? Why should serious archaeologists and students pay any attention to such "wacky" ideas? To answer these questions, this course attends to two kinds of controversies: fantastic claims in the past (such as the Myth of the Moundbuilders and the Shroud of Turin) and debates in the present (such as the cultural affiliation of Kennewick Man and uses of archaeology to promote discrimination).

PLAN AND REGISTER

Students can plan or register for course sections from the Schedule of Classes search results. Planning a course section will save it to your planned courses section but does not register it.

The PLAN feature is available as soon as the term schedule is available, giving students the opportunity to plan their schedule before their registration window.

The REGISTER option is only available when the student's registration window is open.

If the REGISTER option is available, you can click Register to automatically enroll in the course.

Tip: Students who have been accepted to a new program for a future term or are in multiple degree programs can select which program the course should apply to by clicking the drop-down under Pick a program type.
