CURRICULUM VITAE

José Graziano da Silva

José Graziano da Silva, 61 years old, received his Bachelor's Degree in Agronomy and Master's Degree in Rural Economics and Sociology from the University of São Paulo (USP) and his Ph.D. in Economic Sciences from the State University of Campinas (UNICAMP). In addition, he has two post-Doctorate degrees in Latin American Studies (University College of London) and Environmental Studies (University of California, Santa Cruz).

Dr. Graziano da Silva has had a distinguished professional career in the fields of food security, agriculture, and rural development. Of particular note is his seminal contribution as Brazil's Extraordinary Minister of Food Security and Fight Against Hunger, in charge of the implementation of the "Zero Hunger" Program ("Fome Zero").

Since 2006, he serves as FAO Regional Representative for Latin America and the Caribbean and Assistant Director-General.

Dr. Graziano da Silva has been nominated as Brazil's candidate to the office of Director-General of FAO by President Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva and President-Elect Dilma Rousseff.

Fighting Hunger

Since 1977, Dr. Graziano da Silva has devoted his efforts to issues related to rural development and fighting hunger while working in the academia, at the political level and with organized labor.

In 2001, he coordinated the formulation of the "Zero Hunger" Program ("Fome Zero") and was subsequently appointed by the President of Brazil Luiz, Inácio Lula da Silva, to the position of Extraordinary Minister of Food Security and Fight Against Hunger, taking on the primary responsibility for the program implementation.

The "Zero Hunger" Program is not merely a reflection of President Lula da Silva's overriding priority, but also represents a significant innovation in regard to the formulation of public policies to fight extreme poverty. A particularly relevant aspect of the program is its holistic approach; its openness to civil society participation in policy planning and resource allocation as well as its monitoring; and the focus on gender as reflected in cash transfers to the women in the households, as a means of empowerment and ensuring more effective use of the resources.

The "Zero Hunger" Program has contributed to lift out of extreme poverty 24 million people in five years and to reduce undernourishment in Brazil by 25%.

Work at FAO

In 2006, José Graziano da Silva became FAO Regional Representative for Latin America and the Caribbean and Assistant Director-General.

In this position, Dr. Graziano da Silva has sought to strengthen family farming and rural development as a path to enhance food security. Also important has been his key role in fostering the "Hunger-Free Latin America and the Caribbean Initiative", which has made the region the first one in the world to commit itself to eradicate hunger by 2025.

Dr. Graziano da Silva has also promoted a substantive agenda connected to the rural issue, advocating for the strengthening of the sector's institutions and for public policies to ensure full and inclusive development in the countryside, with particular emphasis to the problem of rural employment. On this front, three studies prepared by FAO's Regional Office deserve to be mentioned: Boom Agrícola y Persistencia de la Pobreza Rural (Agricultural Boom and the Persistence of Rural Poverty), La Institucionalidad Agropecuaria en América Latina, Estado Actual y Desafíos (Agricultural Institutional Framework in Latin America, Current Status and Challenges), and Políticas de Mercado de Trabajo y Pobreza Rural en América Latina (Employment Market Policies and Rural Poverty in Latin America).

In addition, Dr. Graziano da Silva has actively engaged in promoting joint initiatives with other agencies of the United Nations, including ECLAC, WFP, UNDP, and ILO, international agencies such as IICA and OIE, besides supporting South-South cooperation initiatives.

As Regional Representative, he has actively worked to implement internal reforms within FAO, with a special emphasis to the agency's decentralization process, leveraging the role of national bodies, vesting governments with a more prominent role in the definition of priorities. Equally important has been the openness towards civil society through the engagement of a multiplicity of political, social, and professional and labor entities, in FAO action.

Distinguished Academic Career

Dr. Graziano da Silva has had a long and distinguished academic career from 1978 through the present day, serving as a full professor at the State University of Campinas (UNICAMP) and Chair of the Master's and Doctoral Program in Economic Development, Space, and Environment at UNICAMP's Institute for Economics.

As a professor, Dr. Graziano da Silva has been recognized for his valuable contribution to the training and preparation of a new generation of young Latin American professionals dedicated to the issue of rural development and food security.

He is the author of important publications on rural development, food security, and agrarian economics. He has 25 published books, including O que é a questão agrária ("What is the Agrarian Question?") and De boias frias a empregados rurais ("From Bóias Frias to Rural Workers").

Personal Background

José Graziano da Silva was born in 1949. Brazilian and Italian by nationality, he is married to journalist Paola Ligasacchi and has two children and two grandchildren. He has working proficiency in English, Spanish, and Portuguese.

He is the recipient of numerous awards and honors, including: the Rio Branco Order, bestowed by the President of the Republic of Brazil; the Paulista Medal for Scientific and Technological Merit, conferred by the São Paulo State Government; and the Brazilian Society of Rural Economics, Administration, and Sociology Award (Prêmio SOBER).

CURRICULUM VITAE

Abdul Latif Rashid

Summary of Competence:

Dr. Rashid is the current Minister of Water Resources in Iraq, and is the longest serving Minister of the New Iraq since 2003. Many believe this is the most critical period in the nation's history, the former regime's destructive policies brought to Iraq several wars, and a decade long economic sanctions that culminated in the 2003 war with the eventual change of regime.

Assuming the water portfolio by Dr. Rashid was seen by many a major challenge as the economy of Iraq was essentially in ruins, and the nations infrastructure was suffering from years of neglect and lack of maintenance, and boasted self harming policies such as the draining of the Marshes.

After seven years of Dr. Rashid's leadership, the Ministry of Water Resources (MWR) has become a preeminent ministry with a continually increasing annual budget exceeding 1 billion USD. Revitalizing and running the MWR with more than twenty five thousand staff and enormous daily challenges in rehabilitating the water resources infrastructures and undertaking development projects in post-war Iraq were a genuinely successful test in leadership and decisiveness in all the areas concerned; even with the constant financial, security and time limitations.

Dr. Rashid's guidance has been instrumental in ensuring the MWR successful cooperation and interaction with relevant major actors, including donor countries, sister organizations, the World Bank and various United Nations agencies. This experience provided exceptional opportunities to engage, understand, negotiate and implement major development projects in Iraq.

Dr. Rashid has served as the Minister of Water Resource in four consecutive governments of Iraq in extremely difficult circumstances proving an adaptive style of management in facing ever-changing and dynamic challenges in post-conflict Iraq. He has demonstrated outstanding management qualities, reliance, commitment to changes and achieving the maximum with pragmatism and limited resources.

Before becoming a Cabinet Minister, Dr. Rashid worked in the corporate world as self-employed, independent consultant in addition to taking on Senior Executive management roles and Board Membership of many companies.

Dr. Rashid was also a leading figure in the Iraqi National Congress (INC), the then main Opposition Group to the former Iraqi regime.

CURRICULUM VITAEMiguel Ángel Moratinos Cuyaubé

Date of birth: 8 June 1951

Nationality: Spanish

Marital status: married to Dominique Maunac, three children

Miguel Ángel Moratinos Cuyaubé has devoted his political and professional activity to international relations. A career diplomat, in April 2004 he was sworn in as Spanish Minister of Foreign Affairs and Cooperation—a post he held until October 2010—after holding different positions of responsibility in the Spanish Foreign Service, and being the European Union Special Representative for the Middle East Peace Process.

Throughout his career, Miguel Ángel Moratinos has been renowned for his clear political leadership, as proven by his work during the Presidency of the United Nations Security Council, the Chairmanship-in-Office of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, the Chairmanship of the Council of Europe, and the Presidency of the Council of the European Union; in the latter case, he promoted the launching of the Lisbon Treaty and of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union. Furthermore, Miguel Ángel Moratinos has exercised his great negotiating capacity through intense consensus-seeking activity, enabling the resolution of the crises that arose during his Chairmanship of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe. Moreover, during the Spanish Chairmanship of the Council of Europe, the reform of the European Court of Human Rights through Protocol 14 was effected, in addition to the negotiation and agreement on the Declaration to mark the 60th anniversary of the Council of Europe.

Since his appointment in April 2004, Miguel Ángel Moratinos has been the first Spanish Foreign Minister to also be, at the same time, Minister of Cooperation. In this capacity, Miguel Ángel Moratinos has granted special importance to cooperation in the multilateral sphere (placing Spain, in 2009, as the sixth-largest UN contributor), and to the challenge posed by the Millennium Development Goals. Under his mandate, Spain has nearly doubled its development cooperation, which rose from 0.24% of GDP in 2004 to 0.46% in 2009, and this has become an absolute priority for Spanish Foreign Action. As Minister of Cooperation, Miguel Ángel Moratinos promoted the creation of the UNDP-Spain MDG Achievement Fund, totalling 618 million euros (845 million dollars), nearly 10% of which (81 million dollars) are managed by FAO. In 2009, gross Spanish ODA for agriculture, food security and rural development was 10.3% of Spain's total ODA, thus achieving, three years in advance, Spanish Cooperation's goal of 10% by 2012.

Within the framework of a clear commitment to effective multilateralism, Miguel Ángel Moratinos inspired initiatives such as holding the High-Level Meeting on Food Security in Madrid in January 2009, together with the United Nations Secretariat, which led to the Spanish Government's pledge to earmark, in five years, a billion euros for programmes on agriculture and combating hunger and malnutrition. This pledge was completed a few months later, at the G8 Summit in L'Aquila, with another 500 million euros. Another achievement worth highlighting is the recent establishment of the Spain-IFAD Food Security Fund, totalling 300 million euros.

As Head of Spanish Cooperation, Miguel Ángel Moratinos has also fostered the search for new financing sources and methods, as demonstrated by the initiative on Innovative Financing Mechanisms and the signing of the Initiative against Hunger and Poverty (IHP), a result of the Geneva Declaration (January 2004), and which was supported by the United Nations Secretary-General.

From a regional perspective, Miguel Ángel Moratinos has placed particular emphasis on strengthening Spain's ties and good relations with its neighbours and partners, promoting dialogue among the International Community's principal actors. Noteworthy in that regional perspective is his action regarding Latin America, Asia, Africa and the Mediterranean.

With regard to Africa, during the Spanish rotating Presidency of the EU Council, Miguel Ángel Moratinos promoted the signing, in Burkina Faso, of the Second Revised Cotonou Agreement between the European Union and the Africa, Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) Group. Moreover, it is also worth highlighting the great impact of the first and second Africa Plans—the latter of which is currently in force until 2012—on Spain's relations with the African continent, together with the holding of the first Summit between Spain and the countries within the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) in 2009. The creation of Casa África is further proof of Miguel Ángel Moratinos' commitment to strengthening Spain's ties with Africa.

Noteworthy in the Mediterranean context is his contribution to the creation of the Secretariat of the Union for the Mediterranean, with headquarters in Barcelona, and, along the same lines of developing relations in the Mediterranean, it is important to underscore the creation of Casa Árabe, Casa Sefarad and Casa del Mediterráneo during his mandate as Minister of Foreign Affairs and Cooperation.

It is also important to highlight the launching of the Balkan initiative with the 2010 Sarajevo Conference. This restated the European perspective of the Balkan countries, which showed important political and economic progress with a view to their future accession to the European Union.

With regard to Asia, Miguel Ángel Moratinos has paid particular attention to promoting and strengthening ties between Spain and the Asian region, through diverse initiatives such as the first Action Plan for Asia and fostering trade relations between both regions by creating diverse business forums, as well as cultural relations promoted by Casa Asia. Regarding Afghanistan, through the Spanish presence there, Mr. Moratinos personally instructed to establish a program to grant access to techniques of agricultural improvement, and to create an agricultural training project in Kabul and Qal-i-naw, in close cooperation with the Afghan authorities. He also proposed the creation of an Agricultural Fund in order to guarantee Afghan farmers a minimum price for their produce.

Lastly, and with regard to the Latin-American region, Miguel Ángel Moratinos has made the most of Spain's position as holder of the rotating Presidency of the Council of the European Union in 2010 to support the conclusion of important agreements negotiated with Central America, Colombia and Peru, especially in the sphere of agriculture. Furthermore, within the framework of the Ibero-American General Secretariat, he has fostered the promotion of programmes on territorial management, in clear connection with his commitment to combating climate change. Also of great importance was his decision to create a Spanish Water and Sanitation Fund for Latin America and the Caribbean, promoted within the framework of the Inter-American Development Bank, and based on the recognition of underprivileged regions' right to water and sanitation.
