EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

- At its 147th Session in November 2012, members of the Finance Committee were provided with a comprehensive progress report on the implementation of the '2012-13 Human Resources Strategic Framework and Action Plan' and the revised structure of the HR function, which had been approved by the FAO Council at its 144th Session in June 2012.
- Since November of last year, steady progress has continued to be made with a number of HR initiatives, as reflected in the updated 2012/13 HR Action Plan attached to this document. In addition, the present report highlights the status of the five initiatives for which Committee members specifically requested updates. These are: (i) reduction of recruitment timeframes; (ii) geographic representation of Junior Professionals; (iii) the corporate mobility policy; (iv) gender and geographic representation targets; and (v) HR policies on Delegations of Authority and Hiring of Retirees.

GUIDANCE SOUGHT FROM THE FINANCE COMMITTEE

- Members of the Finance Committee are invited to take note of progress with the HR initiatives included in the HR Strategic Framework and Action Plan 2012/13, and of the information provided about the five initiatives, for which status reports were specifically requested in the Report of the 147th Session.

Draft Advice

- The Committee took note of progress with the HR initiatives included in the HR Strategic Framework and Action Plan 2012/13, and of the information provided about the five initiatives, for which status reports were specifically requested at the 147th Session.

1. Since the 147th Session of the Finance Committee held in November 2012, steady progress has continued to be made with most of the key HR initiatives grouped under six Organizational Outputs in the 2012/13 HR Action Plan. The progress achieved is reflected in the updated Action Plan attached as an Annex to this document.

Overview of the major current HR priorities

2. The establishment of a framework to promote continuous learning and development within the workforce is critical for a knowledge organisation to secure the requisite technical capacity and expertise. A current priority in this area is the revision of the corporate learning strategy to reflect emerging needs and priorities, including building the capacity of Decentralized Office staff in programming and operations tools. In order to address corporate priorities in this area and establish strong monitoring and evaluation mechanisms, staff development allocations for 2013 have been centralized under the aegis of the HR support service. This will further enable FAO to assess the relevance and quality of its training programmes and reinforce a consistent approach in the use of its staff development funds. The revised learning strategy framework will take into consideration the revised approach and incorporate recommendations made during the evaluation of the learning function in 2012 with a view to adopting cost effective methods of delivery of learning programmes.

3. Following the consolidation of active job titles in 2012, progress continued to be made in developing Generic Job Profiles (GJPs) for each FAO job family. As part of the second phase of the Competency Framework project, the GJPs are being mapped to the new competencies during the first quarter of 2013. Within this period and in support of the development of the 2014-15 programme of work and budget, substantial work is being undertaken on managing positions and staffing structures within different organizational entities. This exercise also involves potential changes to existing organizational structures and will entail the development of an overall framework to institute effective organizational design.

4. Pursuant to the findings emanating from the Salary Survey for General Service Staff conducted in Rome by the ICSC in April/May 2012, proposals were developed in consultation with a Joint Advisory Working Group and subsequently endorsed. As a result, the revised salary scale and allowances recommended by the ICSC were introduced with effective date 1 February 2013 as a secondary salary scale applicable to staff recruited on or after that date. The revised salary scale will also be applicable to staff rehired after a break in service. The existing salary scale, which has been in effect since 1 November 2010, remains applicable to staff recruited before 1 February 2013. This scale will be frozen until the secondary salary scale reaches the same level by means of the yearly interim adjustments. The use of service differential has been discontinued with effective date 1 March 2013. At the time of the preparation of this report, the Joint Advisory Working Group continued to consider modalities to align the FAO Separation Payment Scheme with the national separation payment scheme.

5. In order to establish an official corporate mechanism to recognize high performance and address cases of underperformance, the Organization is developing a Recognition and Performance Improvement Policy. The draft policy proposes several rewards and recognitions options, with a tangible link to performance evaluated under the Performance Evaluation Management System (PEMS), which was officially rolled out to all staff as of 1 January 2012. It also proposes linkages of PEMS to administrative decisions such as the extension and conversion of appointments, as well as measures to address serious cases of under-performance.

6. A review has also been undertaken of current practice regarding the recruitment of international non-staff human resources. The objective is to establish a corporate framework for the recruitment of international Consultants and Subscribers to Personal Services Agreements, incorporating guidelines for managers and Human Resources Servicing Officers on classification of assignments, establishment of categories from junior to senior level including honoraria bands, and establishment of a standard calculation of the proposed living allowances for non-locally recruited employees. Taking into account recommendations made by the internal auditors, rules governing rental subsidy were revised, and more rigorous controls on the use of rental subsidy were introduced. Furthermore, harmonizing FAO's approach with practice in the UN Common System and in other duty stations, measures were introduced as of 1 February 2013 establishing reasonable maximum rent levels based on the family size for Rome-based staff.

7. In pursuing a reinforced HR management function, the Organization continues to reaffirm its commitment to the principle of consultation with staff on matters relating to terms of employment and conditions of service as provided in the FAO Staff Regulations, whilst recognizing the Director-General's managerial authority as embodied in the Constitution and General Rules of the Organization. With the fulfilment of the IPA and Reform initiatives, the fruitful collaboration realised through the Ad Hoc Joint Advisory Committee on FAO Reform (JAC/FAR) will continue through the regular consultative mechanism that had been established previously between the administration and staff associations. The Organization endeavours to further strengthen the consultative process by promoting dialogue between management and staff while better clarifying the respective roles of management and staff associations. In this connection, measures are being identified to rationalise and streamline a number of staff related functions to secure a framework that supports more effectively the needs of staff and avoids potential duplication of efforts as well as ineffective utilisation of resources.

Update on the five HR initiatives highlighted by Finance Committee members

8. At the 147th Session, Committee members specifically requested updates on five key HR initiatives to be presented at the 148th Session. These initiatives are (i) reduction of recruitment timeframes; (ii) geographic representation of Junior Professionals; (iii) the corporate mobility policy; (iv) gender and geographic representation targets; and (v) HR policies on Delegations of Authority and Hiring of Retirees.

Tangible steps to reduce recruitment timeframes

9. A number of steps have been taken in the past two years to streamline the recruitment exercise for Professional staff including reduction of the posting time for external vacancies, the roll-out of i-Recruitment and redesign of the FAO employment website to be dynamic and interactive. A summary of these initiatives was presented to the Secretariat at its 147th Session.

The geographic distribution of Junior Professionals

10. The first cohort of 18 Junior Professionals, who joined FAO in July 2011, comprised 11 participants (61%) from non- and under-represented countries, of whom seven were from developing countries. Upon completion of the recruitment exercise, two countries which were previously non-represented, namely Haiti and the Maldives, became equitably-represented.

11. An analysis of the applications received for the first cohort of JPs revealed nevertheless that only 285 (or less than 10% of total applications) were from nationals of developing countries and of these, only 50 were from nationals of non- and under-represented countries. Accordingly, measures were taken to actively reach out to eligible candidates from target countries when the recruitment process for the second cohort commenced in August 2012. These included sending emails to Permanent Representatives and FAO Representatives of all non- and under-represented countries providing information about the programme and requesting their support in identifying relevant associations and institutions in their country, through which the programme could be advertised.

12. The break-down of applications for the second cohort of JPs indicates that the aforementioned measures have had a notable impact. Of the 1,996 applications received, 981 (or nearly 50%) were from nationals of developing countries and 257 (or 13% of the total) were from nationals of non- and under-represented countries. This represents a significant increase on the first cohort.

13. Further measures undertaken to ensure that geographic representation targets for the second cohort are met include central identification of applicants from non- and under-represented countries as well as ongoing dialogue with the recruiting units aimed at raising awareness of these applicants and their active consideration for interview. Before the vacancy announcements for the third cohort of JPs are released, an analysis will be conducted of application numbers by country for the current cohort in order to develop an informed marketing and advertisement strategy for future selection exercises.

14. Measures have also been established to build the long-term technical capacity of Decentralised Offices by placing the majority of JPs in Regional, Sub-regional and country offices. To this end, while thirteen of the first cohort of JPs was placed in Decentralized Office locations, all seven JPs in the second cohort will be assigned to Decentralized Offices on appointment – four in the Africa region, and one each in the Asia and Pacific, Latin American and Caribbean and Near East regions. All JP positions are placed in technical areas.

Progress on the corporate mobility policy

15. In December 2010, Voluntary Guidelines on Staff Mobility were introduced in FAO, based on the practice of matching staff members who express an interest in mobility with available posts. At the beginning of 2011, a target of 100 geographic mobility assignments was established for the biennium for staff on regular programme-funded positions, or fifty per annum for each of the two years. In total, 102 staff moved geographically in 2012, either between Headquarters and Decentralized Offices or between regional, sub-regional and country offices. Of these movements, fifty were undertaken by staff on regular programme-funded positions – exactly meeting the established target.

16. Efforts remain ongoing to finalize the new corporate mobility policy. In light of the strategic importance of this policy, a decision has been taken to retain the proposed policy in draft form until the incoming HR Director has reviewed it in consultation with the Director-General to determine how to position mobility within the overall direction of human resources management in FAO, bearing in mind the strategic objectives of the organization.

Progress toward achieving gender and geographic representation targets

17. The latest report on geographic representation reflects a reduction in the number of non-represented countries from 45 in January 2010 to 35 in December 2012; and that of over-represented countries from 13 to 4. It also indicates an increase in the number of equitably-represented countries from 116 to 137 during the same period. These figures are due, in part, to measures which have been presented in previous Sessions, such as the establishment of an FAO database of associations and institutions to actively target qualified candidates from non- and under-represented countries and women. An increased number of qualified applications from these groups are expected to make a tangible contribution towards improving gender parity and geographic representation in future.

18. Further efforts to improve geographic representation include the development of departmental targets. Progress towards achieving the targets, first established in 2010, has been monitored by the HR Division on a biannual basis with related reports submitted to the Director-General. At a corporate level, all gender and geographic representation targets included in the Medium-Term Plan 2010-13 have already been met or exceeded.

19. With regard to gender, annual targets by Department and Office were first established in April 2008 and subsequently revised in late 2009 for inclusion in the Medium-Term Plan (MTP), with the objective of making tangible progress towards meeting the UN target of gender parity at professional and above levels. At the end of 2012, all MTP targets have either been met or exceeded and in total, the percentage of female staff at professional and higher levels in all locations was 36%, compared to 35% at the end of 2011.

20. In October 2010, a corporate HR Gender Action Plan was endorsed and published, summarizing the measures that FAO intended to take to increase female representation at professional and above levels, and create a more gender sensitive and inclusive work environment. A complementary policy has been developed in consultation with stakeholders setting out in detail the actions that FAO will now take to achieve this goal. The proposal has been discussed with two focus groups composed of staff members from corporate and technical departments.

HR Policies – Delegations of Authority and Hiring of Retirees

21. The review of the Delegations of Authority is ongoing. The review aims to further delegate authority for decisions in the area of human resources, in line with the principle of subsidiarity, in order to streamline and improve efficiency in the administrative work of the Organization.

22. In line with the decentralization process endorsed by the member states, the review is also considering which decision-making authorities currently taken at Headquarters could reasonably be given to the Decentralized Offices in order to reinforce empowerment at country level and strengthen the administrative role of Regional, Sub-regional and Country offices in fulfilling the Organization's mandate. Once the review is completed, any ensuing delegation of authority on HR activities will be facilitated by the establishment of a network of HR Business Partners which aims to provide an extra level of capacity in Regional Offices to undertake work associated with the additional delegations, monitor compliance, and provide support in effective HR management.

23. As reported at the 147th Session, the new Retiree policy was issued in October 2012. In order to attract qualified individuals with more competitive remuneration, it stipulated increased remuneration ceilings applicable to UN pensioners and introduced a re-defined, and more limited, definition of the term "UN Pensioner". Since the policy was introduced, there has been no tangible change in the number of pensioners employed by FAO, which has remained relatively stable throughout 2012 at an average of 98 per month, ranging from 105 in June to 92 in November 2012.

Progress Reporting

The formulation of the HR Strategic Framework and Action Plan, first introduced in the 2010-11 biennium, facilitated the integration of both regular programme HR activities and the Immediate Plan of Action (IPA) initiatives into a single results-based management framework. This approach has been conducive to establishing the linkages between individual HR initiatives and ensuring cohesive delivery of HR services.

The following pages provide an overview of the HR Organizational Outputs, their expected impact, and a brief report on progress with significant initiatives. The colour-coded reporting system summarized below indicates the status of each initiative with respect to the timeframes established at the beginning of the 2012-13 biennium.

1. Recruitment and staffing policies and procedures support timely and effective staff recruitment and placement and comply with established gender and geographic representation objectives.

Overview

This Organizational Output aims to establish selection and recruitment procedures that facilitate the achievement of gender parity and geographic balance, whilst continuing to uphold the paramount importance of competence and technical efficiency in selection decisions. Since highly qualified candidates are declining their offer of employment due to lengthy selection processes, measures are also being introduced to reduce recruitment timeframes. Once FAO's new Competency Framework is implemented, the overall recruitment and staffing process will be strengthened with the systematic and consistent inclusion of competencies in selection decisions.
