▶ Sharon Rowen has combined 37 years as a trial lawyer and 20 years as a filmmaker to bring to life the story of women lawyers in America. In her groundbreaking film, Balancing the Scales, Sharon interviews five generations of women lawyers, including Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Gloria Allred. The film was broadcast nationwide on public television in 2017. Since its completion in 2016, Sharon has screened the film and presented her conclusions about gender equality in the legal profession to some of the world's largest firms, corporate legal departments, national bar associations and national women's organizations, including the ABA/Harvard Summit on Retaining Women in the Profession. Ms. Rowen received her BA from Emory University, and her JD from Columbia Southern College of Law. She is a founding partner of the law firm of Rowen & Klonoski in Atlanta.

Reviews about the Keynote Speaker

“Sharon Rowen is a spectacular speaker! I saw her presentation on 'Balancing the Scales' at the ABA Harvard Summit last year and highly recommend you see this presentation and her film.”

-Kim J. Askew, K&L Gates

Kim Askew is a recipient of the Dallas Bar Association Distinguished Service Award for 2017 (which going forward will be named Kim Askew Distinguished Service Award) and the ABA diversity commission 2015 Spirit of Excellence Award.

“The film shines a spotlight on the problem of subtle discrimination of women in law firms.”

- Angela Morris, Daily Report

“The documentary film specifically illustrates the struggle many women attorneys face as legal professionals who choose to balance both cultural pressures and the law.”

- Sarah Green, Law Week Colorado

“'Balancing The Scales' puts the current struggle of how women currently stand in the legal industry into historical and generational context. Its strength lies in its rich anecdotes and the willingness of the women who are interviewed to share their personal experiences on screen.”
