

WEEKLY WEATHER BRIEFING

8 PM CST

Sunday, December 22, 2024

Prepared by:

NWS New Orleans/Baton Rouge

Situation Overview

- Warming trend taking shape through the upcoming week.
- Rain chances increase late Christmas Eve Night and into the day on Christmas Day. Generally light amounts at or less than a quarter inch expected.
- Rain chances also present into late the weekend and perhaps into next weekend.

Christmas Forecast

- Rain chances increase, but overall mild conditions. No White Christmas this year. ☹️

Christmas Forecast

- Rain chances on Christmas Day generally around 50 percent for most of the forecast area.

Christmas Weather System

What

Scattered showers and storms likely during the late morning timeframe

Above average temps in the low-to-mid 70s

When

Wednesday, December 25th
(Diminishing overnight into Thursday)

Impacts & Actions

If thunder roars, go indoors.

Use caution driving on the roads if they are wet.

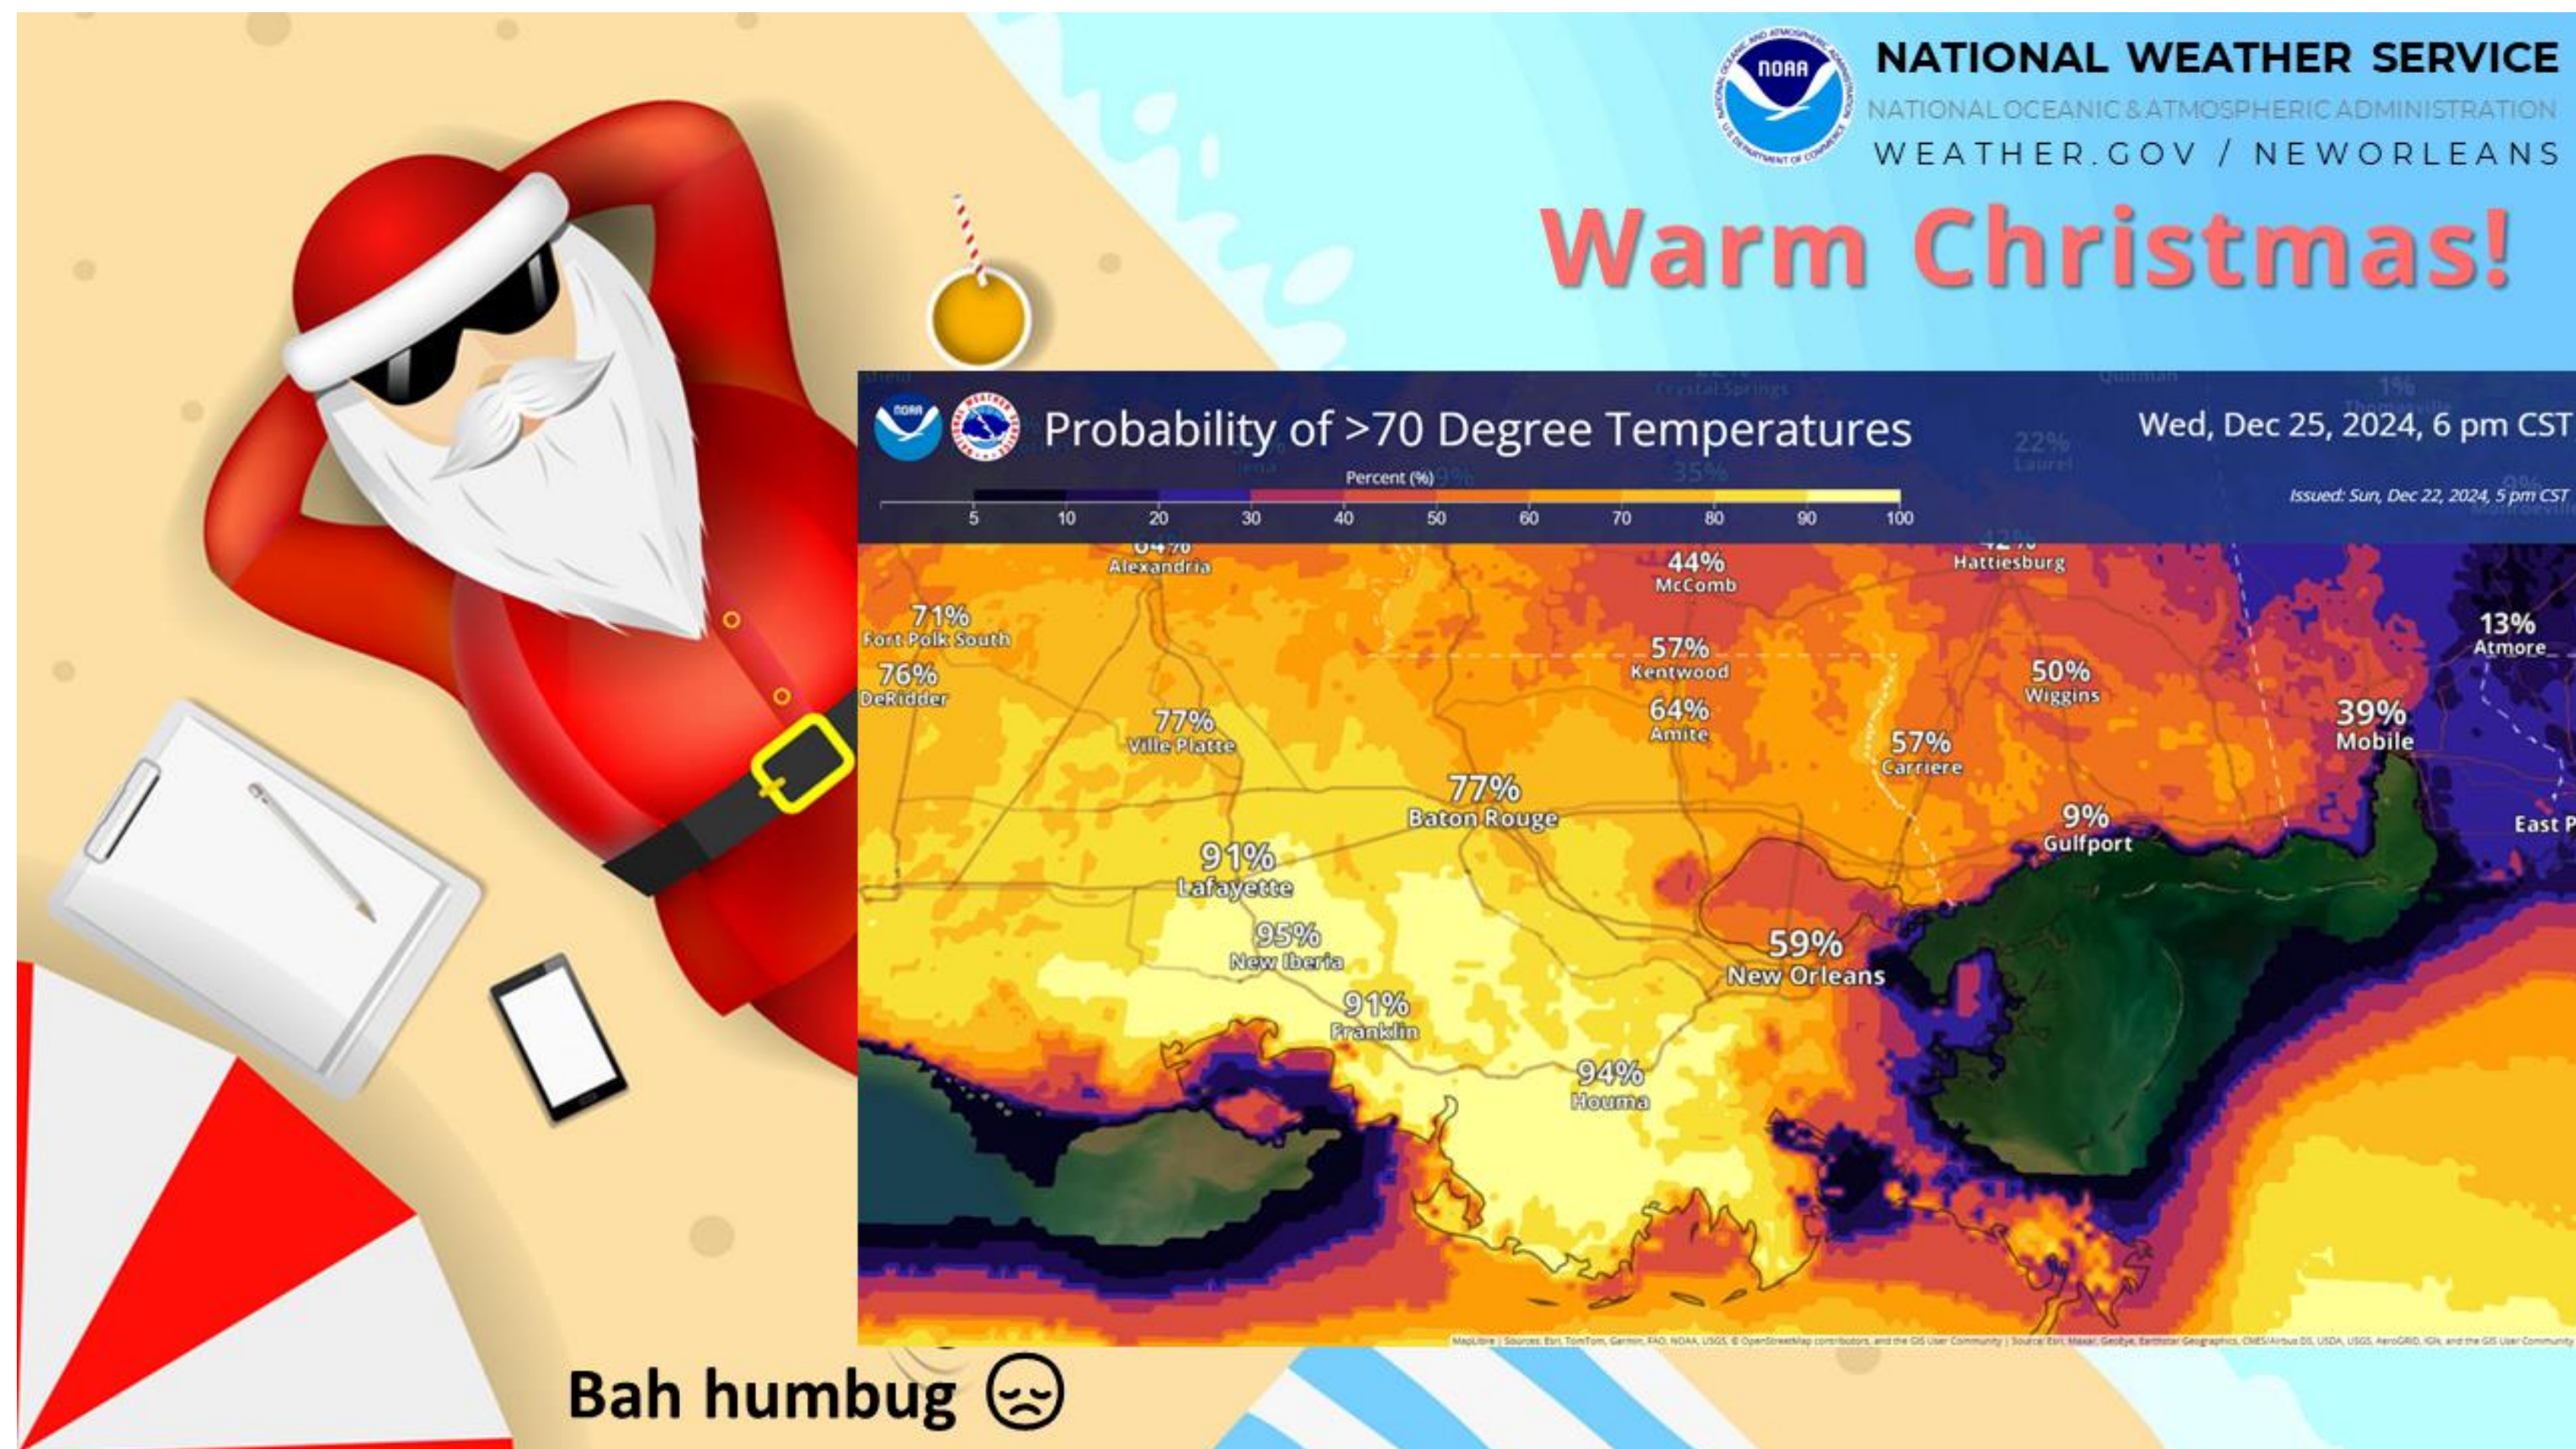

NATIONAL WEATHER SERVICE
NATIONAL OCEANIC & ATMOSPHERIC ADMINISTRATION
1:30 PM – Sunday, Dec 22, 2024

Christmas Forecast

- Above average temperatures with most having a high likelihood of warming above 70°F.

Day 3-7 Hazard Outlook

- No significant hazards for our region through the next week anticipated at this juncture.

Day 6-10 Temperature Outlook

- Warm across the nation.

Day 6-10 Rainfall Outlook

6-10 Day Precipitation Outlook

Valid: December 28, 2024 - January 1, 2025
Issued: December 22, 2024

- A lean toward slightly above average rainfall over the next week or so.

Summary of Impacts

- Warming trend taking shape through the upcoming week.
- Rain chances increase late Christmas Eve Night and into the day on Christmas Day. Generally light amounts at or less than a quarter inch expected.
- Rain chances linger into late the weekend and perhaps into next weekend.