

About Notre Dame of Maryland University:

Notre Dame of Maryland University, a selective liberal arts university, transforms the lives of its students. Confident, capable learners and leaders thrive in the vibrant, personal community at Maryland's distinguished women's college, located in Baltimore with satellite locations throughout Maryland. The University's history enriches innovative opportunities, as students immerse themselves in research, study abroad and service to the global community. Women and men succeed in our College of Adult Undergraduate Studies, Graduate programs and, the School of Pharmacy. Graduates excel as leaders in careers, communities and families - and transform the world.

Staff and faculty enjoy a collaborative, fast-paced, and challenging work environment. In recognition of your hard work, the University offers a comprehensive benefits package including health, dental, and vision, as well as retirement and tuition remission for you and your eligible dependents.

Job Description:

Notre Dame's School of Arts, Sciences and Business, is seeking a full-time tenure track assistant professor of criminology to teach a range of sociology and criminology courses within the liberal arts tradition with the possibility for administrative leadership beginning August 2019. Applications including CV, cover letter and any other materials are accepted through the online system only. Classes at NDMU are scheduled face to face weekdays, weeknights, Saturdays, hybrid, and fully online.

The Department desires to welcome colleagues who value teaching in a liberal arts and sciences environment and who have a particular interest in undergraduate education. The department values the integration of gender and culture into course content. Experience and/or interest in service-learning is desirable. Faculty are expected to be deeply involved in the life of the University, including advising students, contributing to committee work, and participating in major University events. Faculty members are expected to pursue an active research agenda and to support student research and practicum experiences.

Requirements:

Applicants should possess a doctoral degree in the discipline for which the course is taught and should have university teaching experience. Experience with online teaching and online course development is highly desirable. All instructors are expected to convey course information and communicate with students through the University's online course management system.

Additional Information:

Non-Discrimination Policy: Notre Dame of Maryland University does not discriminate in offering equal access to its educational programs and activities or with respect to employment terms and conditions on the basis of age, ancestry, color, creed, disability, gender, gender identity or expression, genetic information, marital status, national origin, race, religion, sex, sexual orientation, or protected veteran's status in accordance with applicable federal, state, and local laws and regulations. The following person has been designated to handle inquiries regarding the non-discrimination policy: Chief of Staff, Notre Dame of Maryland University, 4701 North Charles Street, Baltimore, MD 21210, 410-532-5109.

Notre Dame of Maryland University is an Equal Opportunity Employer. For employment related inquiries, please contact Human Resources at human\_resources@ndm.edu or 410-532-5898.

Application Instructions:

All applicants MUST include:

1. Letter of application - can be addressed to Maria Mouratidis, chair & professor, psychology and criminology departments
2. Curriculum vitae
3. Brief statement of teaching philosophy
4. Names and contact information for three professional references
5. Reprints of publications
6. Copies of teaching evaluations