

acknowledge that the end of species diversity would be an evil, which could not happen by genetic mixture at the species level because different species cannot interbreed. That fact defines a species. As explained (page 7) species evolutionary differentiation begins with racial differentiation. Animals are protected from diversity elimination in their evolutionary racial stage because they can more readily sniff racial pheromone differences than humans. Their olfactory sense is better than our human noses and they are consciously aware of Nature's breeding prohibitions. Humans may also be aware of those prohibitions at the subconscious level, although they are very good at suppressing their instinctual emotions, such as the sexual in general, giving rise to moral behaviour or to unnatural behaviour when that suppression is excessive.

But those pheromone-triggered instincts are still there, and we should never forget that they evolved for our survival. We foolishly ignore them, including in this case when they would serve for our racial survival. Those same instincts in human beings arguably are the unrecognized reason for the many racial problems in multicultural countries like America. We are left with the conclusion that the problems of racism are not caused by racism itself, but by the imposition of liberal multiculturalism on otherwise naturally formed, racial-cultural (ethnic) nations. The best remedy for racism, therefore, is to re-establish in America the natural racial-cultural order of peoples that the world had before European imperialism scrambled that picture. Essentially, that is the ORION solution.

The Plan

The subject of race has been disparaged since America scrapped its National Origins Policy in immigration, 1965, resulting in America today becoming a polyglot collection of many races, but the fact remains that race, along with culture, is a defining ingredient of any nation. This meaning of the nation concept has been lost for Americans, and we of the ORION Party want to retrieve it for our peoples. This means partitioning the present confines of the United States into racial zones, determined by referenda in all 50 states to decide what states would fall into the particular zones. Once people have decided where they belong, those zones will have borders established and nations declared. This is intended to separate all races, including White, Black, Aboriginal, Hispanic and any other wanting to preserve its identity. ORION is a party to preserve diversity and welcomes all who want the same.

America today is a disunited country, a lot of that disunity stemming from multi-racialism, which in turn is a result of the money power that has no respect for national identity. Cheap labor brought by multiculturalism is profitable, and the globalist money power is no friend of racial-cultural nationalism. The one solution suitable to all races is partition of the United States, including Canada possibly beginning with the separation of Quebec. If India can do it in 1947, so can America in coming years without the violence of that partition.

The scenario envisioned by ORION to accomplish racial partition is as follows: the party will campaign to win the American Presidency and Congress. Allied with disparate racial-national groups, since the election of Donald Trump we know this is achievable. Upon winning the Presidency and Congress the party will immediately dismantle the Federal Reserve. Functions of the Fed will be assumed by a publicly owned federal bank. Outstanding Treasury bonds will be paid, thereafter none issued and no interest bearing federal debt will thereafter be incurred. The fractional reserve system will remain and no further reform need be considered. We do not anticipate any need to nationalize the entire banking system. Reinstitution of the gold standard is a possibility. Partition of the country will not commence until banking reform is fully accomplished. The same banking reform would wisely continue in each of the separate nations after partition.

During the time of banking reform, referenda will be held in all 50 states to determine the number of people wishing to belong to the various racial divisions, i.e., White, Black, etc., and the divisions will be determined by present demographics and the number of people subscribing to each racial zone. When the confines of partition are decided a period of adjustment will be declared for people to move to their desired zones. In the case of non-zone residents there will be the incentive to move out, but this need only apply to people of breeding age, not the elderly or sterile. Military force will be used if needed, with legal mandate, to ensure that this law is respected and complied with peacefully. Every compensation will be made by the still extant federal government to people for their losses, if incurred, and costs sufficient numbers to select from, not only at the individual level but also at the level of species. Nature, being insentient, does not “know” which species should live or die; that is decided by the strengths and weaknesses of the species in the competitive struggle. If that struggle is to mean anything, there has to be diversity. Millions of years ago there were five or six distinguishable species of the ape creature, Australopithecus, only one of which led to modern humans. What race of modern Man will lead to the future? We do not know, neither does the Universe. The only way to determine is by letting the present races and cultures play out, and that means allowing racial-cultural diversity.

The tragedy of ignoring our moral over-sights, as we are beginning to realize, is that the assumed trifling consequences have a way of not being so trifling. Such is the result of “multiculturalism”. As Robert Putnam, Professor of Public Policy at Harvard University has shown (page 13), public trust is diminished by what he calls racial “diversity”. Trust is an integral part of social interaction. Civilization is affected. Would we give our credit card number over the phone to a total stranger at the other end of the line without some measure of trust? Would businesses be conducted, in the billions of dollars, without trust? Could the lack of trust, therefore, have been a factor in the decline of great civilizations in the past? Cosmopolitanism did in fact accompany the decline of the Roman world, and also in the case of other civilizations. Will the same cosmopolitanism be a cause for the passing of the West too?

The moral implications do not end there. We Absolutely! But the problem with multiculturalism is that it destroys diversity. The illogic of media inspired multicultural opinion is that the mixture of races and cultures seen in the streets of our Western cities is synonymous with racial diversity. The reality is, as history shows, when races are socially amalgamated they blend. The result is no race - and no diversity.

Human beings have an innate sense of morality in judgement of misdeeds beyond legalities, an intuitive accord with Nature that tells us something is wrong but can be rationalized away and assuaged when the misdeeds go beyond the expedient effect on ourselves. Cutting down old-growth forests has brought conservation laws and a general sentiment of understanding with the trees and tree-huggers, while elsewhere the slaughter of trees continues unabated in a profitable industry. A similar sentiment is evident in the public mind with racial mixture, reflected in the word miscegenation, the prefix “mis” indicating an aberration or mistake as in “miscarriage”. Regardless of miscegenation the world continues, so we must wonder if in this case Nature has planted in the human mind a mistaken or useless intuitive sentiment.

Not in regard to a fundamental need in Nature - evolution. Diversity is integral to that requirement. Throughout the aeons of time millions of species have come and gone, 99% of them now dead, and the world today is full of species. Why so many? We can think that in four billion years, if it can happen it will happen. That does not answer: how? Natural selection is fundamental to evolution, and as with any selection there has to be of migration. When migrations are complete the racial zones will be declared nations and borders established.

The “incentive” mentioned will be the willingness of people to live in their own racial environments, with schools, police forces, services, etc. politicized to serve their racial communities free of any multicultural influences. We have heard of “White flight” away from deracialized communities, ORION will mean racial flight toward racial communities in the sense of whole nations. The perception of our party is that people generally prefer their own racial environments, and nations would have developed historically along natural racial proclivities, but this history did not occur in all countries because it was disrupted by imperialism. We therefore see no need for military enforcement to force migration of noncompliers, since all people will eventually comply when they see their neighbourhoods change. Migration will be incentivized but still voluntary.

We anticipate by this scenario that the resulting White nation will occupy the West and mid-West, the Black nation will occupy states in the South, the Hispanic the South-West, and the Atlantic states could remain multicultural. Anticipated French-Canadian separation of Quebec would leave the western provinces of Canada to join the American White nation, if desired. It would also encourage the native Indian partition of northern Canada. All would be established democratically by the choices people make.

The first step is up to you, the voter. If you are White and want a White nation, or Black and want a Black nation, or... etc., we are your party. If you are worried about inflation, increasing disparity, declining middle class, incessant wars, etc., we are your party. Re-establishment of the racial-cultural concept of nationhood is particularly important for the White voter, since America will no longer be a White country after 2060. From constituting 85% in 1960 the White population in 2060 will be 43%. The Black and Hispanic populations together will be 45%. White decline is due to a non-replacement birth rate, mixed race relationships and non-White immigration.

ORION is not White supremacist. The conflation of White supremacy with White nationalism is a tactic of the media to associate White nationalism with violence, intolerance and 'hate'. White nationalism is none of this. Yes, all White supremacists are also White nationalists, which does not mean that all White nationalists are White supremacists. All Texans are Americans but not all Americans are Texans. It is that simple. Just as other separatist movements, of the Basques, Scots, French Canadians, Chechens, Kurds, etc. want nations of their own with no claims of racial superiority, the same is generally true for the White people of America.

The end of the United States will undoubtedly be a tragedy, but more important than any political configuration is natural heritage. That is what we are attempting to preserve. We ask for your assistance by voting ORION in any coming federal election.

The following three essays give the general philosophy of the ORION movement.

THE IMMORALITY OF 'MULTICULT'

Every day Americans have the opprobrium of White racial-cultural dominance drummed into them, whether it is with the Black Lives Matter mantra, police brutality, Cancel Culture, Critical Race Theory, movies, commercial advertisements, and all manner of atrocity propaganda in spite of the fact that Western societies were the first in all history to outlaw slavery. The effect on the average White mind can only be to familiarize the White population with White replacement, and to normalize the moral desirability of that occurrence because of objectionable White racism.

So it seems only fair to examine "muticulturalism" for its morality. We can see, first of all, the deceitfulness of its proponents by their obsequious reference to multiculturalism as synonymous with diversity. Whenever a White neighbourhood becomes less White it is spoken of as becoming, not less White but "more diverse" - a positive occurrence. Certainly diversity is desirable as we see in Nature. Species diversity is very important for an ecosystem because it gives stability and the ability to withstand environmental stress. The destruction of the world's ecosystems, now occurring, is of concern, and if all life's ecosystems were totally destroyed that would be an atrocious evil. It would mean the destruction of our world. So the destruction of Life's diversity is seen evil and this evil is fully recognized. To extend the principle to humanity would seem most appropriate, that is, we should seek to increase the diversity of humanity, and what better way than to increase racial diversity?

Lawrence Seaway, trans-Canada highway and established hospitals and universities, all without inflation. Regardless of what we think about Nazi Germany, it was the first country to come out of the Great Depression by this system, and Germany experienced little inflation throughout the years of World War II. Abraham Lincoln did the same during the American Civil War by issuing debt-free money known as Greenbacks. Speculation has been that this was the reason for his assassination, and of John F. Kennedy who also threatened to issue debt-free money.

In summary, there is no need to have awesome federal debt in private hands with its interest burden. The enormous interest generated by this illicit borrowing is inflationary when interest on new money does not represent new production. In a reformed system, to finance industrial projects money would continue to be loaned by a central bank at interest to private banks, which in turn would loan it to the public at higher interest, as in the current system, but federal government projects would be financed directly from national treasuries. There would be no public interest burden to private financiers for this reason.

None of this means that national financing for public expenditures requires a nationalized banking system; it simply means that federal procurement of public goods and services does not require private financiers, resulting in the exorbitant flow of national wealth, via interest payments, to powerful elites. Federal spending would be Treasury financed directly through a nationalized central bank, not a private banking consortium as is the Federal Reserve.

NATIONHOOD*

History is not the study of general humanity but of nations. No matter what we study about the past it is always couched in some form of nation, but the forms of nationhood have changed dramatically throughout the centuries. In ancient Greece 'nation' meant the polis, or just a city with its surrounding countryside. The French king, Louis XIV, could say: "L'etat, c'est moi" (The state, it is me), for in his time the nation was centred on the king. The Levantine Civilization of the Near East defined 'nation' by religion, as Jews still define themselves today, resulting after two thousand years of the Diaspora in the state of Israel. The Western world has given a spatial meaning to the concept of nation. With all these forms we might ask just what 'nation' means.

The Germans were the first to give 'nation' a racial meaning, and surely race must be part of the definition because we can distinguish nationalities by looking at the people, but then we must acknowledge that most, if not all, nations are ethnic composites. The Japanese certainly consider themselves a nation but are composed of Chinese and Ainu (the original Caucasian-looking, beard-growing race of Japan). Germans themselves are a Nordic-Alpine mix, British are Nordic-Iberian. So if we think of nations only as racial we get a sense that something is missing in our definition.

*This essay is taken from "Nationhood - Race, Nation and the State," Heritage and Destiny magazine, January - February 2021, 40 Birkett Drive, Preston, Lancashire, PR2, 6HE. England, U. K.

That obvious something is culture: nations are racial-cultural divisions of humanity, brought forth by Nature and are not creations of the mind, as is the state. The form of nation can change through the centuries and between civilizations but this definition remains true. Athenians were hardly distinguishable from Spartans racially but they certainly were culturally, hence they formed different nations. Culture even affects ethnicity, for when people share the same language, religion, customs, traditions, etc., they blend, to form a distinguishable national type. If a totally different race blends with an original nation so formed, that original nation is destroyed, for when people with different talents and temperament mix, their culture must invariably change.

With this understanding what can we make of the United States and Canada, defined today as “multi-cultural nations”? Obviously here is a contradiction of terms. The view in these countries is that a nation is an economic-political region demarcated by a line on a map like the forty-ninth parallel. Ask any American or English Canadian what the difference is between nation, state and country and he/she would not be able to tell you, although these are as different as culture, government and territory. Such a superficial view of nationhood suits the economic power structure of the corporate elite because modern corporations are nationless, and just as they move capital to diverse international locations with loyalty only to their profit margins, the encouragement of people to move across borders is similarly determined by the same profit motivation. With an abundant supply of labor, wages can be held low regardless of where that labor incomes, have the power of taxation. New money pumped into an economy can be withdrawn using taxes. If done in equal measure to expenditure there need be no excess money in an economy or scarcity of it (causing depression). The big advantage is that there would be no public interest payments to private investors by federal governments for public goods and services, and thus no transfer of public funds from taxpayers to moneyed financiers, the main cause of wealth disparity in Western societies. Nor need there even be an increase in taxes when the expenditure is on public transportation, education, etc., because that expenditure increases production.

The end of federal debt financing would cause immense interest savings just from military procurement. Government-financial collusion suspiciously is the incentive for the bloated U. S. military budget, which in 2018, a time of relative international peace, was over twice as large as the military budgets of Russia and China combined. All such military procurement is particularly inflationary by its nature because it represents production made largely to be destroyed. If to pay for this or any federal expense government bonds cannot be sold to private investors, the bonds are bought by the Federal Reserve, a sale known as “monetizing the debt”. In that practice the entire sale plus interest on the bonds becomes new money; it is purely inflationary and that is admitted.

In case federal treasury financing of public expenditures is thought Utopian, it is nothing new in the world. Canada had that system between the years 1938 and 1974 and it was during those years that Canada financed its participation in World War II, built the Saint principal of a bank loan is cancelled out of existence when the loan is repaid, but the interest is not. It is what private banking investors live on, and on bank loans it is interest on new money. Rent for an apartment is money already in existence, but the rent on a bank loan, the interest, is money that does not represent new production. It is inflationary.

Worse yet, the real scam of the private banking system is on public debt, because federal governments have no comparison with private individuals and businesses due to their legal right to levy taxes. Governments borrow funds by selling bonds in “Open Market Operations”. The major players who buy those bonds are insurance companies, Big Business and banks, to whom by far the major part of the interest is paid, and paid to people who are already owners of wealth, meaning a transfer of wealth from taxpayers to wealth holders and is the major reason for the growing disparity in our Western societies. It is parasitical but all in line with our private banking system.

In the case of government debt the interest is particularly parasitical because it is completely unnecessary. Federal governments do not need to borrow and pay interest at all! Instead, public works can be financed directly from their federal treasuries. Instead of first borrowing money like businesses and households must do, highways, bridges, etc. can be financed directly with money immediately spent from federal treasuries without interest payments. The big bug-a-boo raised in doing so is always that it would be inflationary. Yes, it would be – but remember: governments, unlike individuals and bus-comes from. Multiculturalism is profitable.

The identification of culture with nationhood is generally recognized but the racial component of the above definition is more contentious, due to the liberal assumption that the whole concept of race is a mistake, being rather a social construct and therefore a notion that should be dismissed. This opinion is very curious because no one has any difficulty admitting that species exist, and racial differentiation is the beginning evolutionary stage of species differentiation. The great variety of species we see in the world today must have gone through the racial process of evolutionary differentiation. We actually see the process happening in present day Orcas (killer whales), which divide themselves by diet and exhibit racial distinctions from the long held cultural practice of hunting preferred foods, although they are all the same species that can still interbreed. So how can species exist if races do not? We should not be too surprised at this liberal illogic since the same extends to the liberal concept of multicultural “diversity”. The racial diversity evident in our streets today is temporary, because in time when different races live street-to-street and door-to-door history shows they blend, destroying diversity. Government efforts at integration, therefore, are strange, because if we genuinely want diversity the last and least policy we should want is liberal multiculturalism.

So what of the human species? Can we make the same racial case for it? Obviously we can, and not only from the evidence of our eyes. Caucasians have been separated from Africans about 60,000 years and from Asians 40,000 years, which is enough time for people disciplined in the ‘hard’ science of Anthropology to examine the differences between human races that have accumulated in that time. These differences are well known and documented in books such as Race, by John R. Baker, published by the Oxford University Press, and The Origin of Races, written by Carleton S. Coon, professor of Anthropology at the University of Pennsylvania. Amazingly, we should now discard these scholarly volumes, written from years of study using hard evidence, in preference for the views of Sociologists who give us the “race-is-a-social-construct” theory.

To understand race we must first understand that the concept refers to the differentiation of populations, to numbers, not individuals. Neither the bigot nor liberal recognizes the statistical nature of race. If a particular race has not been renowned for achievement, the bigot concludes that its members are “inferior,” even an individual possessing a high achievement potential. Conversely, the liberal generalizes from the examples of a few outstanding individuals, but by presenting a member of high achievement proves nothing concerning the collective, which is the issue. No individual wholly defines any group. We could make an observation on the differences in height between men and women, statistically men being taller than women. This is generally true although it is also true that many women are taller than many men. An observation on the group has nothing to do with an observation on the individual, and vice versa. We must approach the subject of race with this understanding.

there is both gain and loss the system would seem to be in balance. Or is it? Let’s not forget that on that created $9,000 loaned to the public, interest must be paid. If the interest rate is 5%, that is $450 more than the system generated originally and not represented by the production of goods and services. Where does that extra $450 come from? There is only one way: it has to be created by the same system, and since it is new money unrepresented by increased production, it is inflationary. We often hear that when times are good inflation is inevitable. Here is one reason, but that reason will not be found in any standard economic text. Of course, there are other reasons for inflation, such as the loss of production from weather and disease, but these are episodic..

Obviously the wealthy do not like inflation either, more so than average citizens, for the simple reason that on their loans with inflation they receive less value on their money when the loans are paid. But when inflation gets out of hand, as it is liable to in a private banking system (because of the interest motive), there is deliberate contraction of the money supply, which causes an economic recession or even depression. Here, then, is the reason for business cycles. What can be supported by our banking elite is creeping inflation, and that is what we have had in all countries of the West for many decades. It is when our dollar does not buy what it could ten years ago that we have reason to gripe.

In the private capitalist system interest can be justified the same as rent. Whether rent is for an apartment, car, lawnmower, etc. or for the equivalent value in dollars, interest is like rent only on money. The system than the original $1.00, i.e., inflation. Profit masks the inflationary effect, and that effect accumulates, giving extensive debt.

Money is created from debt in all countries using the “fractional reserve” system, which means all countries of the West. We realize that banks loan our deposits and pay us interest on those deposits, but few realize that this is how money is created. Under this system a fraction, say of a $1,000 deposit, must be kept in reserve and the rest loaned, so if the fractional reserve is 10% then $100 is kept in reserve for people who might want to withdraw their deposits, and $900 loaned. But if that $900 is deposited in another bank, then 10% of that, or $90, must also be kept in reserve with $810 loaned, and so on. If taken to its extent this system (banks plus public) generates $$900 + $810 + $729 + \dots = $9,000$. That $9,000 was created “out of thin air” but in line with private enterprise when there are many competing banks, none receiving interest on the totality of the new money generated. If the system is monopolized with only one bank, then on the basis of the $1,000 deposit the one bank does create, with the various exchanges between its branches and public, the extra $9,000, all from debt. Thus it is that if the system in toto were one bank that monopoly creation of money becomes a powerful force when privately owned, and that is what the Federal Reserve virtually is: a monopoly cartel of privately owned banks.

Similarly, when a $1,000 deposit is withdrawn the system loses $9,000 by the banks retracting the money supply the same as they generate it, and since

Being statistical, population variation can be placed on a Bell Curve, shown above for two populations, A and B. Most characteristics of a population lie in a continuum, with people who possess a very high and very low measure of a character being low in number, and people who possess an average measure being high in number. Figure I shows difference ‘x’ between averages for any particular character measured for the two populations. The shaded area represents the area where the character measurement is the same in the two populations, and for this reason liberals claim little or no difference between racial populations. But to be noted is difference ‘y’ measuring the level of what could be genius in one population over another. When we take a higher measurement than average, at ‘k’, and compare the difference ‘y’ between the two populations, we find that

'y' is larger than 'x'. The claim of insignificant difference between racial populations ignores this measurement. Even if 'x' is small, for a characteristic that is culturally valuable the difference in population number can be more important than we would expect from looking only at the difference in averages.

Unfortunately, population differences that occur irrespective of race have often been conflated with racial differences. The two populations, A and B, could be of the same race, but they could also be of two different races defined by, say, skin color. Whether of the same race or two different races, difference 'x' may well be zero. It does not occur because of skin color. Silicon Valley is very aware of this, since much of its talent is drawn from beyond American borders. The consequences for the change in the "National Origins" American immigration laws (1965) have been considerable, described in the Cosmos Theology booklet, (pages 14-15):

"...we see people in high-paying jobs in industry, academia and government who are obviously not nationals and performing well in those positions. Science and technical journals are filled with names that are difficult to pronounce in the native tongue, and a time of globalization is also a time of industrial "outsourcing," resulting in millions of national workers facing unemployment and dependancy. Racial problems arise, the national population declines and replaced with immigration, "multiculturalism" becomes the mantra of politicians and policy-setters while nationals are saddled with historical and racial guilt for discrimination.

"We are left with the question: how justified is nation-must be kept in balance for a stable economy. This simple rule is generally not followed in modern economies because the voting public does not understand the mechanics of inflation, and does not realize how we the people are being fleeced by that hidden tax.

Now let us return to our hypothetical example to see how this occurs in practice. Instead of first supposing an apple in existence and then the extra dollar, let us suppose that a dollar causes an apple to be produced. That is, a farmer *borrow*s a dollar, one printed for the purpose of producing an apple. Once produced the system has a dollar and an apple. The system is in balance. The loan is returned, the dollar cancelled and the apple eaten. All that happened is that the dollar was created before the apple. So what? That creation actually benefited production. Critics of our present system claim this causes inflation because bank credit is created "out of thin air." We see in this simple system of a dollar and an apple that this is not where inflation comes from. It comes from the inability the farmer to only return a dollar because the creditor expects interest on his dollar loaned. If the interest is 5%, the farmer must return $1.05, not just $1.00. Where does the extra $0.05 come from? The farmer could indenture himself to his creditor to pay the $0.05, he could counterfeit $0.05, or obtain it by borrowing more money. In the later two methods we see that it is the $0.05, the interest, that is inflationary. If the farmer already had the $0.05 he would only borrow $0.95 and the system would remain approximately in balance. In practice the interest cost is covered by selling the apple at $1.05 or more. But this assumes more money in the

A plague stalks America today, a plague caused by its banking system. The symptoms are: on-going inflation, increasing economic disparity, declining middle class, corruption in high places, exorbitant payouts, lessening democracy, crime, even wars. If allowed to continue we will eventually have a peon system - a system of elites ruling the rest of us.

To understand the current banking system that affects all nations of the Western world, we must understand the importance of the money-goods balance. If the money supply in an economy increases over the production of goods, there is inflation. That is, if an apple costs one dollar now, but the money supply is doubled, that same apple will cost two dollars. This is monetary inflation. Notice it has nothing to do with apples. This is so bizarre when on a national scale that people find it hard to believe. Of course, on a national scale the doubling does not happen overnight. The price of anything is what people will pay for it, and with more money in people's wallets they will pay more. The rise in prices is gradual as prices are bid up, so that new money in excess of production is indeed the cause for the rise. Fortunately, if production is also doubled the one dollar value is restored. The best cure for inflation is increased production. The money supply and national production alism and should there be national laws and programs based purely on human considerations that ignore the national existence? We then have the question: are job requirements the only ethical requirements for nation building, sufficient to ignore racial considerations?”

Private companies searching for talent is one side of the story. Mass immigration that can change the nature of a population is quite another. What can be different between racial populations is racial history. If the history of one is more arduous than the other, that population will experience natural selection more severely than the other. If that selection acts to reduce the number or just the breeding potential of its less gifted members, that race will be left with proportionately more of its members who are more gifted. This process of natural selection is well known and proven. That is, difference ‘x’ will then exist in the desired quality between the two races.

It is probable that selective factors can explain the differences in national GDP levels around the world. We know from DNA evidence that human beings migrated out of Africa thousands of years ago, to inhabit Europe and Asia. It is very probable that Europe and Asia have been the continents where civilization progressed the most, in contrast to sub-Saharan Africa, because of ancient selective migration. The migrants were also later subjected to the challenging conditions of an Ice Age, unlike Africans. Due to their migrations northward the migrants entered regions with less sun than Africa, and to produce vitamin D their skin lost pigmentation. Two evolutionary selections occurred: one type requiring survival techniques in a new environment, and the other being a skin adaptation. One was cultural, the other purely physical. They are two completely different types of change, but have become associated in subsequent generations of the two populations. The achievement disparity between descendants of migrants that left Africa thousands of years ago and those of sub-Saharan Africans today has nothing to do with skin color, that remains true, it is due to racial history. But although the amount of skin pigmentation does not mean that one race has to be higher or lower in the measurement of human potential, as the bigot would have us believe, the liberal, conversely, must see that the difference need not be statistically zero. A race featuring physical adaptations, such as skin pigmentation, may very well undergo selective factors also forcing cognitive adaptations affecting culture, factors that do not play with equal severity on other branches of our species.

Regardless, we might ask: are there characteristics notably identified as racial that also incline a population toward the crafts of civilization, or at least have the possibility of producing a particular national character? Temperament would be one such possibility, and a major contributor to that is the pineal gland situated deep inside the brain. The pineal gland produces melatonin, a hormone that helps us go to sleep and is suppressed by light, particularly blue light which boosts attention and mood. For that reason sleep experts tell us that watching TV or a computer screen before retiring at night is a bad idea. The main access that light has for influencing the pineal gland is the eyes, and since blue eyes are blue because of less iris pigment, a reasonable conclusion is that more light enters blue eyes than dark eyes, therefore having more effect on the pineal gland. Whatever the effect it is probably small at the individual level, but when added over millions of people the result could be significant. Here is an example of how a racial feature might influence national character.

All considered, race and nation are intimately bound. When that connection is broken we have the loss of harmony and trust found by one study published in 2007, conducted on 30,000 people in the United States. Again, to quote Cosmos Theology, page 15:

(Robert Putnam) “. . . found the results so disturbing that he delayed publishing them until six years after the time of his study in 2001. He found that low trust with high ethnic diversity is associated with lower confidence in local government, local leaders and local news media, lower confidence in one’s own influence, lower frequency of registering to vote, less expectation that others will cooperate to solve dilemmas of collective action, less likelihood of working on a community project, less likelihood of giving to charity or volunteering, fewer close friends and confidants, less happiness and lower perceived quality of life, and more time spent watching television. Most disturbing was the finding that diversity not only causes less trust between ethnic groups, it also causes less trust within ethnic groups. Clearly a racially based nationhood is the most stable and harmonious collectivity for human existence.”

The ORION Party is the only party with any awareness of that need.

ORION

(Our Race Is Our Nation)

A nation is a source of pride, distinction and belonging to its citizens, and these are presumed to be the natural right of all peoples the world over, but in American have been preempted by elitist notions of multiculturalism. For that reason we of the ORION Party will replace the current American state with racial nations comprised from the various racial-cultures that now inhabit the United States and Canada. These will include the White, Black, Hispanic, French Canadian, native Indian and any other that wishes to preserve its heritage. The realistic alternative in time can only be amalgamation of all with the loss of diversity, which would be anti-Nature (since the trend in Nature is always toward diversity), or inter-racial conflict beyond the imaginable.
